Dear Customer:

We offer this Camellia, Rhododendron and Azalea Catalog in hopes that it will help you in selecting the varieties you wish. We specialize in Camellias and have over 350 varieties to select from. Each year we get new Varieties. As it takes a while to propagate from these newer ones we do not have a large stock of them for a few years; therefore these varieties are not listed in our catalog. If you do not find a variety listed that you are interested in, drop us a card and we may have one to spare.

We have the newest ideas out in Camellias. "Espalier Camellias," in all different shapes, sizes and forms. Then we have "Tree Form" and "Umbrella Form" grafted Camellias. We also have Camellias grafted with three, four, five and six different varieties on one plant. We have one Camellia with over 25 varieties grafted on it. We are proud to say that we also have the "World's Record Camellia," which has over 100 varieties grafted on it. This bush is truly a sight to see when in bloom.

We offer the suggestion "Camellias for Hedges." They are truly the most beautiful of all shrubs for this purpose. They should be spaced $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 to $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet apart, depending of course on how you wish your hedge to grow. If you wish a spaced hedge you may set them $3\frac{1}{2}$ feet apart, if you wish a solid hedge then they may be set $2\frac{1}{2}$ feet apart. A Camellia hedge is actually inexpensive to grow after the initial cost. There are no expensive wages to be paid for pruning as Camellias seldom need pruning until 12 or 15 years old, and then only the new growth each year. Many other shrub hedges have to be pruned two and three times a year, which costs a lot of money, or if done by oneself, takes a lot of valuable time. Then, too, there are so many lovely varieties to select from the Camellia family. The hedge of assorted Camellia varieties and colors seems to be the favorite; but would be just as lovely in one solid color. We will be glad to help you in selecting the varieties you wish for this purpose. We feel that you should have help from us in deciding your varieties if you wish the assorted Camellia hedge as many varieties would not be suitable for hedge planting. Some varieties grow tall and narrow, some weep, some wide, etc. 10 per cent discount for 10 plants or over.

We have some of the finest Rhododendrons that are on the market. Some are so new they have not been rated by the society. All varieties are true to name and color. We also have a fine selection of Azaleas, Heathers and other evergreen shrubs.

We welcome all visitors at our Nursery. The best time to see the Camellias blooming at the greenhouse is from January until the end of May. Our Nursery is open all day Sunday for the convenience of our Customers.

As we send our catalog to prospective customers all over the U.S.A. many plant lovers are unable to visit our Nursery. These people must have all of their plants shipped to them. They can be assured that no plants leave our Nursery that we would not want ourselves. We guarantee our stock to be healthy, true to name varieties. All plants are balled and burlapped. Every precaution is taken in packing. No extra charge for packing unless notified. We are not responsible for breakage in transit. Claims should be settled with your carrier immediately. Cost of transportation for all shipments is paid by Purchaser.

Please order plants by their names, sizes and prices. Allow plenty of time for shipping. We accept money orders or checks. C.O.D. orders must pay half of the total value of order before plants are shipped.

Please state if we may substitute an equally good variety or a larger or smaller size if we are sold out on the size or variety you wished.

Sincerely yours,

Planting and Care of Camellias

HERE ARE A FEW SIMPLE INSTRUCTIONS TO FOLLOW WHEN PLANTING YOUR CAMELLIAS

1. Do not plant Camellias too close to the house on the sunny side of the house; or next to anything that throws off a reflection as it may burn the foliage. Allow at least three feet distance from object.

2. Camellias will grow in any soil; but you can help them to grow faster and to set more buds by building up the soil with peat moss, rotted vegetation or leaf-mold from the woods.

3. Do not over-fertilize. If you use well-rotted barnyard fertilizer use only on top of ground. Do not ever use any lime as they are an acid loving plant and lime sweetens the soil. Since the war we have been using Vigoro and we have had great success with it. If you use this be very careful not to use too much as it is better to fertilize twice a year than to burn the roots by over-fertilizing all at once. Be sure to water fertilizer in well.

4. The watering of a Camellia is very important. The fiber roots grow close to the top of the ground and therefore will dry out if not watered during the dry months of the year. The peat-moss you put on top of ground around your Camellias will help a lot. Remember, the care you give your Camellias will tell the following spring. If your bush has a yellowish colored foliage, then it either needs fertilizer or you have let it get too dry during the summer months. In this case the blooms may not develop to their normal size. Do not cultivate around a Camellia as you may disturb the fiber roots.

5. Planting instructions. . . . Leave burlap on plant as it holds the roots all together and keeps the wind from whipping it back and forth in the ground. This applies to any shrub. Plant the Camellia so that top of the ball is about one inch under the ground. This is important because a Camellia does not like to be planted too deep. Always before covering with dirt pour a couple of buckets of water around the ball of the plant in the hole and let dissolve before covering with top dirt. This helps to set your plant firmly in the ground. When you get your Camellia planted add either peat-moss or any other rotted vegetation to hold the moisture and this also allows the fiber roots to grow close to the top of the earth without drying.

THESE INSTRUCTIONS ALSO APPLY TO RHODODENDRONS AND AZALEAS. THEY ALL LIKE THE SAME KIND OF CARE.

CLASS D

Class D Camellias are all new rare varieties grafted on 2 and 3-year roots. The purpose of a grafted plant is to age the plant so that it will grow faster and bloom younger. We do this by grafting onto the root of a Camellia that has grown two or three years. This usually makes it bloom the second year after grafting.

Suggestions on Planting

Camellias, Azaleas and Rhododendrons are three of the choicest shrubs that are used in landscapes. They are all evergreen blooming plants. The Camellias bloom first and before they are through blooming the Azaleas start to bloom and the Rhododendrons follow on through, which gives a long season of blooms. The Mollis Azalea loses its leaves in the winter so should be planted among the evergreen shrubs. The dwarf Heathers also fit in nicely with Camellias, Azaleas and Rhododendrons as they bloom summer, winter, spring and fall. Gardeners that have only a limited time to work in their yards will appreciate all of these plants as there is very little pruning, no transplanting if placed properly to start, and very little if any spraying for insects to do. They are also easy to grow as they all prefer the same type acid, loose peat-moss soil. But one should be very careful not to over-fertilize the Azaleas. A teaspoonful of any acid fertilizer each year is plenty. If your climate is hot and dry no doubt you will have a sweet soil. To produce acid soil epsom salts or aluminum sulphate can be used. About one tea-cup per plant and water in well. They like water on their foliage as they breathe through their leaves, which makes them easy to care for as you can easily turn the sprinkler on them for an hour or so once or twice a week, depending of course on your climate. Never allow soil around plants to dry. The old Camellia and Rhododendron blooms are liable to cause a disease so be sure to keep them picked off from plants and do not allow them to lie on the ground. Dispose of them. Do not use them in compost piles.

If these simple instructions are followed all plants should be thrifty, healthy plants that bloom profusely. They should be a joy to all flower lovers the year around.
